This issue of Medical Clinics of North America is dedicated to the important topic of Women’s Health. Dr Joyce Wipf, an expert in women’s health, has done an excellent job putting together a comprehensive issue, covering a number of key areas in women’s health. Many traditional women’s health issues are covered (breast cancer, cervical cancer screening, contraception, and menopause), but this issue covers areas that are becoming more understood as extremely important women’s health topics (cardiovascular disease in women, intimate partner violence, and care of the Woman Veteran). I think the theme is extremely well covered, and this issue of Medical Clinics of North America will be very helpful in delivering outstanding clinical care.

Douglas S. Paauw, MD, MACP
Division of General Internal Medicine
Department of Medicine
University of Washington School of Medicine
Seattle, WA 98195, USA

E-mail address: DPauw@medicine.washington.edu